Course description	This course will examine the significance of (primarily, but not exclusively) African American literature in regard to its historical development as well as within contemporary and global contexts. The aim of this course is to re-examine the representation of race and provide an insight into the development of this part of American literature which is concentrated on racial problems by also providing specific 'tools' within the literary and cultural theory (such as cultural hegemony, postmodernism, deconstruction, discourse theory, structural racism, etc.). The course approaches the development of African American literature as eligible for deeper analysis regarding the concept of race and racial identity, as well as the nation's role in racism, and, finally, problematizes the representation of race in a contemporary context. Regarding these notions, the course basically consisted of two parts. The first part of the class presents the most significant authors within the African American literary tradition, as well as the most important eras and aspects of its development. The second part is the analysis of the representation of race regarding other product makers, different authors, corporations, the entertainment industry, and publishing houses such as graphic novels, popular culture, television shows, video games, etc. With the completion of this course, students will be able to use basic and advanced theoretical concepts of race, racism, and cultural racism. They will also have improved knowledge within the field of literary and cultural theory, as well as be able to analyse the representation of race in various cultural products.
