Course description	Sociolinguistics is an interdisciplinary science that views language in social context and attempts to explain the complexity of the relationships between language, culture and society. Students are acquainted with basic sociolinguistic phenomena through readings of literature relevant for a particular area of research. Students identify, interpret and analyze the phenomena on the basis of selected readings. Students develop critical thinking towards basic sociolinguistic areas of research and towards methods used to conduct such research. Furthermore, students are acquainted with traditional and contemporary theoretical frameworks within which such phenomena are analyzed.
Course content	Lectures: 1. Introduction to sociolinguistics as a scientific discipline 2. Basic terminology (language – dialect – variety – vernacular – koinē – style – register) 3. Dialectology (regional and social dialects; RP; dialect geography) and speech communities 4. Studies on language variation (Fischer; Labov; Trudgill; Wolfram; Milroy) 5. Pidgins and creoles (status; geographical distribution; linguistic characteristics; theories of origin) 6. Diglossia: bilingualism and multilingualism (code-switching and code-mixing)
