Course description	The basic goal of the course is to introduce students to the basic concepts and theoretical frameworks of pragmatics within which language and language use are interpreted from the viewpoint of human behaviour. Thus, the aims of the course include developing students' critical thinking towards relevant theoretical frameworks and methodological procedures from the viewpoint of speech acts and other forms, principles and consequences of communication interaction. Special attention is paid to similarities and differences between relevant areas of pragmatic investigation and other related linguistic disciplines, primarily syntax, semantics and sociolinguistics. This allows for a clearer insight into the interrelatedness of language structure, meaning dimension and extralinguistic factors that contribute to successful communication.
Course content	Lectures: 1. Introduction: defining the concept of pragmatics; history of pragmatics; American and European approaches to pragmatics 2. Relationship between pragmatics, syntax, semantics and sociolinguistics 3. Linguistic usage as a form of human behaviour – basic areas of pragmatic analysis and basic concepts in the analysis of linguistic usage 4. Information structure and conversational style – structure of monologues and dialogues, cohesion and coherence, turn-taking, adjacency pairs 5. Reference and deixis – defining the concept and categories 6. Politeness and face 7. Mid-term test 8. Conversational implicatures – Grice's theory, cooperative principle and maxims, conventional implicatures 9. Neo-Gricean theory and Relevance theory 10. Presuppositions/inferences – cultural differences 11. Speech acts – Austin and Searle; felicity conditions 12. Speech acts and context 13. Discourse representation 14. Discourse analysis – culture and schemata 15. End-term test Seminars follow the topics covered in lectures.
